

WINNER: Paul Grosbusch, centre, a finance and investment management student at Aberdeen University, received an outstanding achievement prize. He is pictured with Barry O'Neill, right, of Carbon Financial Partners, and Mark Whittington

PRIZE

Student's portfolio lands award

An Aberdeen finance and investment management student has received an award in recognition of his efforts on his course.

Paul Grosbusch, a post-graduate student at Aberdeen University, collected the prize from the university and Scottish firm Carbon Financial Planners due to the strength of his portfolio analysis work.

The 26-year-old, who is originally from Luxembourg, set his mind on the financial services industry after working with a corporate finance business in Cologne, Germany.

Mr Grosbusch said he moved to Aberdeen due to his interest in the energy industry, adding he was delighted to be selected for the award.

Barry O'Neill, investment director at Carbon, said the firm worked in partnership with the university because its own investment process was founded on academic research.

He added: "We would like to congratulate Paul on his achievement and wish him every success in his future career."